Introduction

The aim of this section is to enable students to present information about self, family, hobbies and places in town through listening, reading, speaking and writing exercises. These exercises start with simple information and become more complex as the students progress through the topic.

The section is divided into five activities. Each activity may contain one or more aspects of language learning: listening, speaking, reading or writing, but depending on the students' level, they do not have to follow the exact order or do all the exercises in order to progress.

The appendix contains notes on how to write letters, including correctly addressing an envelope, and a list of vocabulary for each topic which students may use during the exercises.

The details of each activity are listed as follows:

Activity 1: Reading and comprehension

This activity aims to familiarise students with the common ways to present personal information, hobbies and fun places in a town in a short piece of writing such as a letter. It also looks at how to address different members of a family in Mandarin.

Activity 2: Language

In this activity, students can familiarise themselves with the ways in which personal pronouns are pluralised by 们 men and how possessive pronouns are formed by using the word 的 de.

Activity 3: Writing

Activities 3 and 4 reinforce the learning results. The aim of this activity is to encourage students to write about their personal details, family members, professions, hobbies and fun places in a town. Students can start with the common ways in which such information is expressed by doing the revision exercise.

Separate exercises are designed to enable students to achieve a common understanding of the ways in which information about personal details, family members, professions, hobbies and places in a town is presented before they are able to produce a short piece of writing.

Activity 4: Listening and speaking

In this activity, students first listen to an exercise while gathering information on name, age, family, family details and hobbies. Then they are encouraged to reproduce the same information through speaking.

Activity 5: More reading and writing

This activity should be completed after students have finished all the previous activities in the section. This activity will challenge more able students, but less able students can complete the activity with teacher assistance.
